

I am indebted to the Rev. L. T. Lawrence, First Presbyterian pastor, for evidence of national mention of this newspaper. While in Asheville, N. C., this month the preacher latched on to a copy of the Asheville Times for August 14, which carried the McNaught Syndicate column "The Brighter Side," written by Neil O'Hara.

Says O'Hara:
"It always has struck us that the daily newspaper of Hope Ark., bears a most fortuitous and inspired name—The Hope Star."

That's it. That's all of it. But it went all over the United States. The words "Star" and "Hope" were first linked newspaperwise in 1873, the year the Cairo & Fulton railroad (now Missouri Pacific) came through this section, creating our town—so the newspaper name is as old as the town is. That first paper, a frontier weekly, was called The Star of Hope by Col. Anson W. Hobson.

It lasted but a few years, owing to the publishing hazards of those early days. But on October 14, 1890, Claude McCorkle founded another Star of Hope. On his death in 1910 it passed to his son Ed. McCorkle, who converted it to an evening daily January 1, 1920.

C. E. Palmer and I bought the paper from Ed. January 18, 1929, consolidating with it the morning Daily Press, owned by D. A. Gean. I confess to changing the McCorkle paper's name, rearranging it as "Hope Star."

Even so, it is a name unique among newspapers—not only for its own sake but because the phraseology rose from the beginning of the town 78 years ago.

It looked like old home week in Hope yesterday. Young Jim Henry, back in Conway where the family now live, from his West Coast Navy post, made a quick trip to see old friends here. John Guthrie, manager of Hope Basket company 10 years ago, was in town with Mrs. Guthrie and their son, from Portsmouth, Va. And another visitor was Lee Garland, here with his family from Crawfordsville, Ind.

I had a good-sized visit with Jim Henry last night. When I saw him last it was October 1946. Talbot Field, Jr., Oliver L. Adams and I on route to Washington for a radio hearing (where we were joined by A. A. Albritton later) stopped overnight with Jim at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn. At the time I thought Jim was in training to be an Episcopalian clergyman, but he corrected me last night.

He got out of school, and the Navy, and joined the Texas Fire Prevention Rate Bureau at Dallas—a job which sent him on inspection trips all over the Southwest, including remote parts of Mexico. He was doing fine, but he got a message one day. Seems Jim on leaving the Navy had joined the Reserve. So his current address is the U. S. Navy Hospital, Oakland, Calif., where he's a pharmacist's mate.

But he told me he had no kick coming—and when his hitch is over he's going to beeline it back to that roving job in the Southwest, although Hope will always be home to him.

Spring Hill to Vote on Board Member, Millage

At the annual school election to be held on Sept. 25, the Spring Hill school district will elect one member of the school board, and pass on the proposed millage rate.

This district is not asking for an increase in millage. Superintendent John H. Houck, Jr., and the school board believe that the present 27 mills will be sufficient to maintain a normal nine month term for the coming year.

The required number of names on a petition for school director on the ballot is 20 days prior to date of election, or September 4, 1951.

Cause of French Wreck Discovered

Metz, France, Aug. 25—(AP)—A French government statement today blamed the crash of two crack international express trains near here yesterday on a signal failure. The death toll rose to 21 persons, including six Americans.

The ministry of public works, which runs the government-owned railways, said there was no question of sabotage in the accident in which the Frankfurt-Paris express was rammed by the Basel-Calls train.

Several Highway Jobs Canceled Due to Cost

Little Rock, Aug. 25—(AP)—Allocation of $2 million in federal funds to help finance construction of a $7 million bridge across the Mississippi river at Helena has been approved by the Arkansas highway commission.

The commission, meeting here yesterday, voted to allot the money at the rate of $200,000 a year for four years.

The allocation is subject to approval of the U. S. public roads administration and hinges on whether congress will appropriate funds for the agency.

An improvement district for construction of the proposed bridge has been formed by residents of Phillips county. The district proposes to raise $5 million to go with the $2 million allocation from the federal government.

The commission also:
(1) Awarded a contract to Olen-tine and Jones, Little Rock, for construction of about 8.5 miles of gravel base course and three small bridges on the Marvell-Walnut corners road, highway 20, in Phillips county. The bid was $309,033.69.

(2) Re-allotted $250,000, previously earmarked for widening of an Arkansas river bridge at Pine Bluff, for use in repairing or rebuilding several old and hazardous bridges on highway 79 in Jefferson, Cleveland and Dallas counties. The commission said the Pine Bluff bridge project could not be undertaken now because of a shortage of steel.

(3) Programmed reconstruction of that part of highway 22 which is in the city limits of Fort Smith. This highway is the main route between Fort Smith and Camp Chaffee.

(4) Authorized Arkansas highway department officials to make emergency purchases of items costing more than $1,000 on competitive bids. This will permit the department to buy materials without waiting for a highway commission meeting. Bids are not required on items costing less than $1,000.

(5) Refused to go along with Governor McMath's wishes for programming work on unpaved gap on several state highways. The commission said that the work cannot be done this year because of a lack of money.

The governor had asked the commission to authorize paving on these roads:

Highway 62 from Pollard to highway 1W in Clay county.

Highway 63 from Imboden to Black Rock, Lawrence county.

Highway 62 from Hardy east to the Willford cut-off road in Sharp county.

Highway 63 from Hardy north to the present Blacktopped road, Fulton county.

Perhaps No Other Soldier Has a Finer Memorial Than a Farm House by the Brook

By HAL BOLE

Roaring Springs, Pa.—(AP)—There is a log cabin by a tinkling brook in the hills some miles from here. And over the stone fireplace in the cabin is a large glass-framed picture of a young officer.

The officer was Capt. Frank K. Camp, a fighter pilot in the last war. The picture has dimmed a little, but not enough to hide the trace of a smile on his young face.

Captain Camp died his war flying in Tunisia, at the time when the Nazi planes out in a mired red the American. The rocky dike of the green hills of Pennsylvania.

In one of his last letters to his father, James Camp, representative of a dairy farmers' cooperative, he wrote:
"Find me a farm back home where I can stay the rest of my life."

The young captain took off on a battle mission one day, and never returned. "Missing in action," said the war department.

Clinging to the hope his son had been shot down and taken prisoner, the father kept on searching for the right farm. Finally he found what he wanted—nearly a square mile of open field and wooded hillside. Plenty of pasture land for young Frank to graze cattle on, plenty of forest in which to hunt the springing deer.

And the father built a neat log cabin by the brook. He put the picture of Frank above the stone fireplace. And the long years of family waiting began. But Frank never came back. No trace of him or his plane was ever found, and perhaps they went down together in the blue waters of the Mediterranean.

Frances and I rode out to the old farm the other day with Frank's older sister, Helen, and her husband, George Palmer, the foreign correspondent. Their two daughters, Nina and Zora, were along, too. On the way we talked about a third child the Palmers expect in October.

"I'd just as soon have another girl, but Helen thinks it would be nice if it's a boy," said George.

He didn't have to say why. Helen was very close to her young brother, and a son would help fill the hole in her life left by the death of Frank.

Two horses that Helena and Frank used to ride—comfort and her son, lieutenant—came up to the cabin, and we fed them some ears of corn.

The two little girls romped and squealed beneath the picture of their uncle, and they were too young to look up and wonder who he was.

Later we went out into the yard and shot at paper targets with an old .22 rifle. Helen had the highest score.

"You didn't have your eyes open when you fired—that isn't fair," said George.

"I used to beat Frank, too, and he said I was just 'lucky,'" said Helen.

That was the only mention she made of her brother. After all these years, his loss is still too near for her to put into words.

As we left, she said:
"Dad comes here once or twice a week, but he usually comes alone."

The last thing I was as we shut the cabin door at twilight was the luminous smile of Captain Frank, whom in the home he never lived to see.

I don't know of any soldier who has a finer memorial.

Man Sought for Reckless Driving

City police have issued a warrant for Doyle Yocum, Spring Hill, on a charge of reckless driving.

About 1:30 a. m. today in Hope an automobile which ran a stop sign almost plunged into a city patrol car and raced, through the downtown area making 50 to 65 miles per hour.

Officer Anderson gave chase in the patrol car, but was outdistanced. He said the fleeing auto almost hit several cars and nearly turned over on a bridge on the Spring Hill road.

Officer Anderson identified the driver as Mr. Yocum.

Slashes Made in Foreign Aid Measure

By JOE HALL

Washington, Aug. 25—(AP)—The senate finance committee has slashed about $800,000,000 off the house-passed $7,200,000,000 tax increase bill and still has several important phases to consider, consider.

The group agreed tentatively yesterday to boost personal income taxes by about $240,000,000 a year. This is $100,000,000 less than would be raised by the individual income hike voted by the house.

The committee meets again today in an unusual Saturday session to try for more action on the bill.

Chairman George (D-Ga.) said the group would tackle corporation tax rates first. The house boosted these to get an additional $2,855,000,000 in annual revenue. After finishing with corporate levies, the senators still must work on excise taxes.

The tentatively-approved finance committee-income tax hike formula gives the taxpayer two options. He may take the lesser of:

1. An 11 per cent levy figured on the tax he pays now.

2. An eight per cent levy figured on the taxable income he has left after deducting his present tax.

The committee voted to make the boost effective Nov. 1 instead of the Sept. 1 date fixed by the house. The senators also sought to indicate that the new levy is a temporary defense measure by setting an expiration date of Dec. 31, 1953; the house did not have a termination date in its bill.

The finance committee knocked out of the bill a house provision for a 20 per cent withholding on dividends, interest and royalties. The house had estimated this would pick up $233,000,000 of additional annual revenue-tax money which otherwise would not be collected.

Also rejected by the senators was the present effective 25 per cent in the present effective 2 per cent capital gains tax for individuals and corporations. This had been figured by the house to bring in $87,000,000 more revenue a year.

Yesterday's decisions made it almost certain the senate version of the tax bill would be well below the house figure, something which has been predicted all along.

President Truman asked for a $10,000,000,000 tax increase, to help finance the mobilization effort and fight inflation.

In adopting option one of the income tax plan approved yesterday, the committee said, no one would pay as much under its tax hike proposal as he would under the house bill.

Unofficial computations indicated that taxpayers would find it more beneficial to use option two if their incomes were above $40,000 or $50,000.

The senate committee also voted yesterday to fix an over-all income tax ceiling of 66 per cent of taxable income for the highest brackets as compared with 67 per cent now. The house voted for 90 per cent.

In knocking out the house 20 per cent withholding provisions on dividends, interest and royalties, the committee accepted a house provision which it said might cut down revenue loss from its action.

This provision requires interest to be reported on amounts over $100 and gives the secretary of the treasury power to require reporting below $100. He already can require reports on dividends.

Important Red Supply Base Is Hit by B-29s

U. S. Eighth Army Headquarters, Korea, Aug. 25—(AP)—U. S. B-29's today for the second time in more than a year bombed Rashin, Red supply port miles from Russian territory which General MacArthur wanted to knock out early in the war.

Thirty-five Superforts hurled more than 300 tons of bombs on Rashin (Najin) in clear weather. The Far East air forces in Tokyo gave no report of damage. But it said 100-pound and 500-pound bombs were dropped on the port's marshalling yards and railroad facilities.

The Superforts met no anti-aircraft fire or enemy planes. All returned safely to their bases in Japan and Okinawa.

Almost 50 B-29s hit Rashin in the first attack Aug. 12, 1950. They struck by radar in heavy overcast and dumped some 500 tons of bombs on their targets.

Rashin, one of the best ports on the east coast of Korea, is 110 miles southwest of Vladivostok.

MacArthur testified before senate committees last May after his removal as supreme Allied commander that he repeatedly asked Washington in February or March for permission to continue bombing Rashin, but was denied it.

Defense Secretary Marshall told the senators permission was denied because the port was so close to the Soviet border.

"It was a question of the risk involved in an operation so close to the Soviet frontier," Marshall said, "and as to the question of ships in the harbor and other mishaps that might occur."

MacArthur described Rashin as "the great central distributing point from Manchuria down the east coast of Korea."

He said he was very anxious to bomb and destroy Rashin. "Its usefulness to the enemy was self-evident," the former United Nations military commander said. "Great accumulations, depot accumulations, were made there. It was a great distributing center."

MacArthur told senators Rashin was about 35 miles from the Soviet frontier, but many show it is 20 miles from the Siberian border.

U. S. navy Panther jets escorted the B-29s on Saturday's raid.

The bombers hit a locomotive repair yard containing a roundhouse and 15 tracks, and 1 track storage yard, a 17 truck marshalling yard, capable of handling 75 cars, a six-track car repair yard, a 12-track holding yard, an engine house, a car repair shop, a central heating plant two warehouses and many smaller structures.

In other air action Saturday, F-86 Sabres jets won a 51-jet sky fight over northwest Korea the second jet battle in two days.

Twenty-one Sabres damaged at least one Red MIG-15 in brief but aggressive action with 30 enemy jets near Sinuiju, Northwestern Korea border city on the Yalu river.

Friday night 28 Sabres tangled briefly with 40 MIG-15s over Sinuiju, midway between the border and the North Korean capital of Pyongyang. The Sabres shot down two MIGs.

No Sabres were reported lost in either action.

Allied intelligence said large numbers of Communist troops were observed moving into the old Red "iron triangle" of central Korea on Saturday for the second straight day.

Allied fliers Friday night struck sharply at Red convoys clogging main highways north and northwest of the truce city of Kuesong.

Traffic Check in City Finds Many Violations

Road blocks thrown up by city and state police brought dozens of arrests here the past two nights on various charges of traffic violations.

The routine roadblock backed cars up for blocks and officers discovered dozens of drivers without licenses along with many faulty lights, no brakes, no city tags, improper auto license tags and various violations.

The supreme Allied commander said he was willing to resume negotiations, halted by the Reds. But he rejected as "malicious falsehoods" Communist accusations that United Nations forces violated Kuesong's neutrality.

Reds broke off the talks two days ago. They demanded a "satisfactory" answer to their charge that a United Nations warplane attacked Kuesong to murder the Red delegation.

Ridgway's reply said the charge was "so utterly false, so preposterous and so obviously manufactured that it did not merit a reply."

The next step was up to the Communists. Ridgway's scorching message gave them a hard choice.

"The harshly-worded reply was sent to Kim Il Sung, North Korean premier, and Gen. Peng Teh-huai, commander of Chinese Red forces in Korea."

"It was first broadcast over the armed forces radio, then delivered to a Chinese liaison officer at the Red outpost of Panmunjom, 15 miles east of Kuesong."

The last paragraph left the door open—just a crack—for a resumption of talks.

Ridgway said, "when you are prepared to terminate the negotiation of armistice negotiations, I will discuss my reply with you."

"The Allied delegation, headed by Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy, stood by at United Nations advance headquarters in Munsan, ready to go to Kuesong if the Reds give the word."

Ridgway's reply, in tone and content, came as no surprise to observers here.

They said he could hardly apologize for incidents he had already branded as "manufactured in advance."

Nor, the observers added, did the Reds accept the "blatant" "satisfactory" answer they demanded.

Rep. Tackett Defends Flood Control

By FRASER EDWARDS FOR HOWARD BUTTLE

Washington, Aug. 25—(AP)—When the flood control-rivers and harbors functions of the Army Engineers are attacked, Rep. Boyd Tackett, Nashville, gets his dander up. And the House Appropriations Committee report accusing the Engineer Corps of misleading Congress on the cost of its civil projects had Tackett's dander up higher than cat's back when a strange dog comes around. His dander is subsiding now that the House, by a two to one majority, has hurled the censure back into the teeth of the committee.

The Nashville congressman spearheaded the fight on the House floor which killed a section of the $1,877,000,000 supplemental appropriation bill, which not only would have endorsed what he believed was unjust criticism of the Army Engineers but would handicap and delay the entire flood control-rivers and harbors construction program. The House sustained Tackett's view by striking out the offensive by a vote of 113 to 57. Then the house, in effect up-held him by unanimously passing the bill.

Imposter Is Ordered Rearrested

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 25.—(AP)—Federal officers have orders to rearrest Mrs. Madeline Frances Evans, the 29-year-old strawberry blonde under $1,000 bond on charges of impersonating a woman air force officer.

Two federal bad check charges were filed against the glib redhead here yesterday, accusing her of cashing two $75 checks at the Biggs Air Force base branch of the Southwest National bank here.

U. S. Commissioner Henry Clifton ordered the U. S. marshal in Austin to rearrest Mrs. Evans. She was arrested by the FBI about Aug. 1 in Austin and accused of spending four days at Bertram Air Force base, Austin, as a WAF officer. The base commander said she had obtained temporary identification papers to let her come and go at the base. He also found she had flown to Austin from El Paso in a military aircraft.

After Mrs. Evans was released on bond in Austin she worked for a while as a waitress at a drive-in restaurant. Federal officers said last night she was still in Austin. They were awaiting receipt of the official arrest warrant.

Mrs. Evans has told reporters she wanted to become an officer to "knock the pins from under" a warrant officer at Biggs. The warrant officer, she said, restricted her husband to the base the day after she was married to Sgt. Rufus Evans of Biggs in a ceremony at Las Cruces, N. M.

Business Women's Fellowship
Mrs. L. J. Bryson was hostess to the Christian Business Women's Fellowship at her home on Tuesday evening. The rooms were decorated with arrangements of garden flowers placed at vintage points.

The vice president, Mrs. B. C. Stivers, presided and the meeting was opened with the theme song, "Evening Prayer," at the conclusion of the business Mrs. Price Stewart presented the devotional.

Gale Halts the Channel Swimming

Dover, England, Aug. 25.—(AP)—A gale reported blowing up in the English channel today virtually closed the 1951 channel swimming season.

The season ends usually by Sept. 1. If the weather stays bad, none could try the swim with any hope of success by that date.

THE STORY: I (Julius Long) have just been acquitted of the murder of Charlie Berman, who had been hired to obtain my lease and to get me out of the land back, even though the bribery can't be proved.

MY place on Minnowauken Island, reached by an eight-foot-a-mile wooden bridge, looked good to me again as I parked in the drive. My father had built it on the waters edge—actually it was a glorified boat house, for there was room for two boats. The boat house was empty now; I'd sold my own 22-footer and the cabin cruiser my father had left me to pay attorney fees.

I was understandably skeptical of promises made by attorneys. Those high-powered fellows at the state capital had made one promise after another, and nothing had been exactly what they had done for me.

I just couldn't get steamed up by Gene's enthusiasm. I got into the house by use of a hidden emergency key and found that Mrs. Mathews, my cleaning woman, had kept it in first-class shape. I peeled off my clothes and threw them into a wastebasket because I didn't think the stink of the county jail disinfectant could ever be washed out of them. I got under the shower, and though the hot water had been turned off, the shower felt wonderful. I had been there five minutes when I heard someone moving around in the house.

I quickly towed, pulled on a bathrobe and went to see who was there.

It was Cleo Cansino, once Charlie Berman's girl, now Earnie's. She eyed me with sultry eyes that matched her coal-black hair. She had made herself comfortable in

DOROTHY DIX

Money Question

Dear Miss Dix: We have raised a large family and have one daughter, 24, at home. My husband has been very sick the last year, and had a serious operation. Although far from well, he is back at work. All of a sudden we seem to have serious money troubles. I went to work about a year ago and have worked steadily since. Here is my problem: My husband thinks I should help support the family, at least until he gets on his feet. He also demands that our daughter pay for her room and board. I say my money is mine as I earn it, and he is supposed to support us.

M. K. T.
Answer: Small wonder that nations cannot get along when the family, which should be the very seat and foundation of co-operation can be as widely divided as this one. Just as long as the almighty "I" comes first in people's lives, so long will we wait for peace and unity!

Remember Your Vows
Have you forgotten, M. K. T., that you took your husband "in sickness" as well as health? You are certainly bound by every code or morals and ethics to care for him in his illness, even if it means using some of your hard-earned wages to clear off the debts incurred with doctors and hospital.

Your daughter is equally bound to help her father. If she is living at home, she should, in any event, be making some contribution towards the family welfare. It is my firm belief that every working child is a responsible member of the family and should make few, maline pouffs and satin ribbons flanked by white tapers in three branched candelabra. A color scheme of white and green was used. Mrs. S. O. Logan and Mrs. T. C. McFae Jr., presided at the punch bowl and Mrs. D. L. McFae Sr. and Mrs. Adam Guthrie, all aunts of Miss Guthrie, presided at the coffee service. Assisting were Mrs. Roy Stuart of Sulphur, La., Mrs. James Guthrie of Camden, Mrs. J. T. Worthington and Mrs. B. W. Reynolds. Soft piano music by Miss Ida Mae Hamilton was enjoyed. Each pinned a corsage at her shoulder.

An arrangement of white chrysanthemums and gladioli flanked by white tapers graced the buffet. The honoree was presented a beautiful tray.

One hundred and twenty-five guests called during the appointment hours.

American Legion Auxiliary Met Monday

The American Legion Auxiliary met Monday, August 20, at 7:15 p. m., at the home of Mrs. J. W. Gist, 308 West First street. A pot-luck supper was enjoyed by 16 members and two visitors, Mrs. D. M. Mosley and Mrs. J. T. Worthington. This was rather an informal meeting. The president, Mrs. Gist, discussed the year's program and plans with the members and visitors.

The next meeting will be at the American Legion Hall. A joint meeting of husbands and wives with a combination of social and separate business meetings of both organizations. This meeting will be on Monday, September 17, at 7:30 p. m. All members are urged to be present at this time.

Miss Virginia Ann Hays is spending the week in Little Rock as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Duke.

Mrs. C. A. Haynes is spending several days in Houston as the guest of her grandchildren.

Of course Cleo could have made the trip in 10 minutes by even a moderately fast speed boat, and Charlie's Seascope had been the fastest on the lake. If anybody should have known about that, it should have been the Seascope had been my boat. Charlie had been a stranger to buy it. Not content with having my resort, he had to have my boat, too.

I picked up my telephone, hoping that the service hadn't been cut off while I had been in jail. I hadn't paid the bill.

Cleo snapped: "What are you going to do?"

"Call the sheriff's office. You're going to tell the sheriff what you just told me." I listened for the dial tone. Cleo said:

"Wait a minute. I didn't come here just to let you know I was in Charlie's house that night. I've something that may be pretty important to you."

I replaced the telephone. It was dead anyway. I faced the girl. "I'm listening."

"Charlie had a reason for wanting me to be at his place that night. He wanted me to be a witness to something. He'd already watched me about hiding in the bedroom. I was to peek out and see as much as I could and especially to hear everything."

She paused to inhale on her cigarette. She had me on the hook, all right. I was listening hard.

"Who was coming there?"

"I don't know. But I do know that whoever it was, Charlie was to pay him a lot of money. Earnie came in from the bank when Charlie was telling me what to do, and he gave Charlie some packages of bills. About this big, the whole stack was." Cleo held her slender, crimson tipped fingers about five inches apart. That would have been a lot of money, even in small bills.

"Was Earnie to be there too?"

"No, he had to go to Cleveland. We both drove him to the train that morning. We saw him off."

"He could have left the train at Marion."

"But he didn't. I didn't see him again till the next day."

of course he'll come to see you. Soldiers are used to traveling. Don't worry about him; make new friends for yourself, then if he doesn't come to see you, at least you'll have consolation in new interests.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler
Copyright, 1951
By King Features Syndicate.

New York, Aug. 24 — With a sentiment akin to awe, not untinged with rindish mirth, I invite you to marvel at the latest outpouring of the incredible spirit of Daniel J. Tobin, the president of the teamsters' union, a magnificent old mountebank who has held his own with Roosevelt, Lewis, William Green and Pauline Singer, Phil Murray, the Holy hand-washer of the C. I. O. Mr. Tobin is also the editor of the international teamster, an organ of personal propaganda published at the expense of his subjects, and comparable in the matter of self-idolatry to Dave Dubinsky's Justice.

For pure, inimitable, serene fat-headedness, innocent of guile or sense of proportion, there is no runner-up to Mr. Tobin. He is absolutely sincere. He believes that he is one of the finest men who ever lived. He even thinks he is honest, moreover, and thus creates an effect of absurdity beyond the striving of any fictioneer who ever lived. Dickens would have toned him down.

It appears that Mr. Tobin has been offended by the world's greed of some colleagues in the racket who have clipped their stuffs for salaries of $100,000. This is a knock on the racket, for immemorial and ever-reliable custom has held the official bid down to modest figures and made up the difference in spontaneous gift-offerings not in excess of $2,000 presented at ceremonial swillings adorned by senators, governors and similar trash. Any spontaneous token of appreciation of $5,000 or more comes within the purview of the internal revenue. There are so many other ways of achieving an income of $100,000 that a labor-statesman cringe enough to take it straight from the kitty and write it on the books fully merits the contempt of Mr. Tobin, and gets it.

"I have been reading in the papers recently of large increases in salaries accepted by labor officials," Mr. Tobin began in the August installment of his running race to himself. I wonder where we are going. When I read about labor men getting $100,000 a year, I am just wondering if the men of labor are not losing their self-respect. I know that when salaries are raised up to anything like $100,000 a year for the president of an international union, that is a mark or a token of appreciation by the membership for the service he has rendered.

The sergeant at arms will throw out all disorderly characters interrupting these solemn thoughts by purring the lips and blowing Grand worthy president Daniel J. Tobin will proceed.

I received an increase about 10 years ago to $30,000 a year. This is more, I believe, than I should receive. In the last convention of the brotherhood I refused to be a candidate for office if they increased my salary to $50,000. I gave my children a college education on a small salary. All of them say they will never do any better than I have in life's service.

Indeed they have done well and their great success was the cause of acute embarrassment to their magnificent old father the time that Lester M. Hunt, the dirty saboteur, then editor of the Teamster, in a mischievous fit, dropped into the August issue of 1943 a two-page spread of a banquet in Washington showing Joe Tobin, statesman, salary $65,000. Fred Tobin, director of the international legislative department, $10,000 a year and Frank J. Tobin, the son who was head of the international statistical department, at $10,000. Frank was also a member of the trucking commission of the war labor board at a salary denotely withheld from public knowledge lest the profit motive be unduly exploited.

Mr. Tobin had long had his suspicions of Mr. Hunt. There was a nasty, almost unclean smirk on Mr. Hunt's lips as he lathered the old man with praise. He seemed almost too idolatrous if that could be. Mr. Hunt was, it turned out, a mischief-maker and his big spread in the middle of the magazine, showing all those pot-bellied, thick-necked Tobins on big salaries on the payroll of the teamsters for doing arithmetic and calling up congressmen, caused expressions of unrest. None of them had ever carried a team or pushed a freighter over a mountain in the dead of winter. It was a foul blow and the rumor ran through the citadel in Indianapolis that Lester Hunt was nothing but an orange-man in the black, secret heart of him. He might be at that. Bad luck to Lester Hunt, anyway.

There were 35 of them there at a big, horseshoe table with flowers strewn along and two wine-glasses before each place while the comonomality, out on the roads, showing through explosives and acid and steam, were slugging Luke-warm canned soup in Joe's lunch and making do with spaghetti when their red-points ran out.

Mr. Tobin never forgave Mr. Hunt for running that picture. "Sure," he said. "Sure." Mr. Tobin said, it showed what a fine family man I am and how well my boys have done in life. But I will not forgive you. Just the same.

Little remains to be told. Mr. Tobin, with his delicate repugnance to a high salary, which would be taxable, put through an amendment to the constitution which is still unique among all such charters alike for its cunning and its permanence. By this provision, as long as he shall live, this great

Legionnaires Again Down Prides 6-3

By MURRAY ROSE
(For Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)
New York, Aug. 25 — (AP) — I'm giving you three winners right now — before it's too late. That is, before the corner gets around to the training camps. Boy, what that "inside stuff" can do to mess you up.

Here goes: Welterweight Champion Kid Gavilan to outpoint Billy Graham next Wednesday; Sugar Ray Robinson to get even on Sept. 12 and take back his middleweight crown from Randy Turpin, and featherweight king Sandy Saddler to whip Willie Pep on Sept. 20 and put an end to their long series.

Sure, Gavilan, Robinson and Saddler are all favored. But you know what's happened to the choices in looking this year. It's been a black list for champs and favorites. And for the alleged experts, including yours truly.

Some nerve, eh? The guy picks Bobby Murphy to knock off Joey Maxim and now he has the gall to try and slip the public three allies. Still with me? Okay, I've got an alibi, no kidding. Plenty of company in the 98 per cent wrong prediction department, too.

When Maxim was first signed to meet the socking sailor, I said Joey couldn't miss. Why Murphy wouldn't lay a glove on him.

Then I made the horrible mistake. I visited the training camps and watched the gladiators in action. Maybe I should have left my spectacles home. I guess I would have been better off in a myopic haze. Some carpers say it's the same with me anyway, glasses on or off.

Anyway, I saw Maxim train. He looked slow, worn and worried. His four southpaw sparrows belted him plenty. The old zip was gone from the champ's legs.

"You going to win, champ," I asked.

"Gee, I don't know," replied Maxim. "I gotta win. I'll try, but I don't know."

With a little prodding, Joe said "Ok, I'll win."

He said it without conviction. Then a trip to Murphy's camp. Even in training the smiling Irishman takes a licking. But oh how can dish it out. He just appeared to be too strong for a Maxim who had been beaten to a frazzle by Ezzard Charles.

Yes, it had to be Murphy. But then again maybe Maxim still had enough left for one more good fight.

Then I ran into a Cleveland writer, who shall be nameless, but who has blond hair, parted in the middle, and always has a big smile on his kisser.

"Murphy's a cinch in ten," he confided. This guy, remember, is a pal of Joey's. "Joey just hasn't got it anymore. Too bad, nice guy."

Several more writers joined the party. The information was exchanged. Yup, it was agreed, Pal Joey was going to get licked.

Well, Joey was nice about it all afterwards. I explained the prediction. He smiled.

"I don't blame you a bit," he said with a grin. "Boy did I stink up that camp. Everyone belted me good. Those sparring partners hit me like I was a pitcher for the Browns. They all hit 400."

Now don't forget our parlay. . . Gavilan, Robinson, and Saddler. You see, I'm going to visit the training camps any day now.

"And if it had been? Would you have watched me go to the chair?" She eyed me with casualness.

"I don't owe you a dime, Jimmer Malloy. Not a dime."

"Then why did you come here and tell me what you have?"

"Because I'm on the hook. Earnie knew I was to be at Charlie's house that night. He'd heard Charlie coaching me. And he knew the money he got from the bank was to be used as a pay-off at Charlie's house."

"Did he know who was to be paid off?"

"No. Nobody but Charlie knew that."
